

POLITICAL SCIENCE, MINOR

POS 363	URBAN POLICY	3
Total Credit Hours		18

Like a fine white wine with a fillet of sustainably sourced Sea Bass, a minor in Political Science (<http://catalog.roosevelt.edu/undergraduate/arts-sciences/political-science-ba>) pairs well with a variety of majors and programs of study at Roosevelt University. Whether you plan to pursue a career in medicine, physics or mathematics, an understanding of the political realm will help you navigate the policy environment in your field of choice, and to graduate as a socially conscious citizen capable of sustained engagement with public affairs. A minor in Political Science is particularly appropriate for students majoring in Journalism. The minor not only offers in-depth knowledge of local, national and international political processes, but helps cultivate what the scholar Andrew Delbanco calls "a skeptical discontent with the present, informed by a sense of the past." Such individuals, like undergraduate physics major and current German Chancellor Angela Merkel, often become global leaders and figures of historical importance.
