SOCIAL JUSTICE STUDIES (SOCJ)

SOCJ 201 - INTRODUCTION TO SOCIAL JUSTICE STUDIES
Various ways of conceptualizing social justice; how the social sciences can be used to understand questions of social justice; case studies in collective action for social justice.
Credits: 3
Attributes: Social Justice Studies, Social Science
Prerequisites: ENG 102 (may be taken concurrently)

SOCJ 208 - INTRODUCTION TO WORKING CLASS STUDIES
Americans generally don't like to talk or think about social class, and until quite recently we've been especially allergic to "working class" as a term or label. In the 2008 presidential election, the term "working class" was used quite a lot, but usually only to refer only to white men in blue-collar jobs (who were assumed to be good at bowling!), rather than to the multiracial, mixed gendered, diverse occupations of the 21st Century American working class. Working-Class Studies is an emerging academic field that attempts to address this situation, in academic research and teaching and in our public discourse. This course will introduce Roosevelt students to this emerging field by focusing on a handful of issues in the social sciences of economics, political science and sociology (with only fleeting reference to work in the arts, humanities, and history), and then asking students to decide for themselves on the relevance of studying the working class in the ways presented.

SOCJ 211 - THE GIG ECONOMY
The spirit and impact of social policy on employment and labor relations. A hard-nosed look at minimum wage, unemployment insurance, equal opportunity and affirmative action, public service employment, welfare reform, parental leave, collective bargaining regulations, and restrictions on plant closings.
Credits: 3
Attributes: Social Justice Studies, Social Science
Prerequisites: ECON 101 or ECON 102

SOCJ 214 - ECONOMICS OF GLOBALIZATION
Globalization and global economic crises have become household words, yet what do they really mean, who benefits, and who loses? This interdisciplinary course examines the phenomenon of globalization using economic, sociological, and feminist analyses to explore controversial themes of the globalization debate, some of which include: offshoring, economic development, international migration, sweatshops, transnational corporations, the Global South, and gender equity. We will examine both the benefits and costs that have resulted from the opening and crossing of international boundaries and borders and examine how these changes have impacted people from both rich and poor countries throughout the world.

SOCJ 360 - INTERNSHIP IN SOCIAL JUSTICE STUDIES
Internship in Social Justice.
Credits: 3
Attributes: Social Science, Transformational Service Learning

SOCJ 380 - SPECIAL TOPICS IN SOCIAL JUSTICE STUDIES
This intensive two-week course explores ideas about justice. Class meetings will contextualize assigned readings. Students additionally spend a day with each of three other scholar-activists from across disciplines and complete three days of transformational learning at an organization working in one of the focus areas. In addition, students will begin the course by attending and participating in the May 2009 Labor and Working Class History Association (LAWCHA) Conference. The conference theme, "Race, Labor and the City: Crises Old and New," will also represent this year's social justice focus of the Institute. Through this dialectic of theory and practice, students will learn to develop their own principles and practical approaches to social justice.
